Dear Sir or Madam,

I am Li Hua, a junior student studying in our school. I'm writing this letter to provide proposals to help our library build a better environment for the students.

My suggestions are as follows. First of all, although our libraries have offered a wealth of printed books, our e-reading resources are relatively lacking. Therefore, I suggest integrating some electronic resources and linking the resource entry to the official website of the library so that students can access the materials more conveniently. Secondly, it is still troublesome to give feedback to the library at present. It is hoped that a feedback mailbox can be placed in the library, so that students can synchronize their ideas to relevant staff at any time. Last but not least, library staff sometimes do not know detailed information about books. Organizing relevant training regularly will be useful to help them know more about books, so as to provide more professional service to students.

I sincerely hope my proposal could be adopted. I am looking forward to your early reply!

Yours sincerely,

Li Hua

Once upon a time, a farmer, who was upset about the slow growth of the seedlings he planted, pulled them up a little bit one by one on the field. Returning home, he said to his family, "I'm really exhausted today, but I finally made the seedlings grow taller." His son ran to the field only to find that the seedlings were all dead.

Nowadays, some parents are eager for the success of their children, following in the footsteps of the farmer, and thus making their children miserable without any academic progress. Should such parents wake up to this problem and let their children grow up naturally?

Dear President,

I am a senior student from our university and I'm writing this letter to offer some helpful suggestions on how to enrich extracurricular activities on campus.

As we all known, participating in activities after class plays a key role in improving practical skills and promoting students' comprehensive development. Thus, I firstly suggest organizing activities that allow students to put their knowledge learned in class into practice and gain hands-on experience. In addition, students can be equipped with crucial skill needed in the workplace by joining activities like leadership training. Last but not least, with pressure increasing steadily, sports and special interest activities are of great necessity, as they provide opportunities for releasing stress.

Thank you for your attention. I hope you find my suggestions useful, and I would be ready to discuss about this matter with you for further details.

Yours sincerely,

Li Hua

Once upon a time, a farmer was plowing the fields when he saw a rabbit galloping past and crashing into a big tree, and then dying. The farmer was elated since he could eat the rabbit meat so easily. He thought, "It would be great if it could always be like this!" So, he stopped farming and waited by the tree every day, waiting to pick up the rabbit that hit the tree and died again. He waited day after day, and the fields were deserted, but he never waited for the second rabbit. Therefore, people mocked him for taking chance as a necessity.

Dear Sir or Madam,

I am a student in our university, and I'm writing this letter to express my sincere thanks to you and give you some suggestions to further improve the services of our student clinic.

In my humble opinion, to begin with, for the sake of students' convenience, would you please open for longer, in case of some emergencies at night. In addition, it would be better if you can purchase some advanced equipment because during the pandemic of COVID-19, the student clinic matters more for ensuring students' safety. Last but not least, it would be better if psychological counseling were available.

Thank you for your attention and consideration of my advice. I hope we can have a much better student clinic.

Yours sincerely,
Li Hua

参考译文:

Once upon a time there was a man who raised a flock of sheep. One day morning, he was ready to pasture his sheep only to find one of them was lost. After looking carefully, he saw a hole on the sheepfold. Obviously, a wolf must have slipped into the sheepfold and taken a sheep away. His neighbor suggested him to fix the sheepfold, but he wouldn't listen, thus finding the next day that another sheep was carried away by the wolf. Since his neighbors' words came to his mind, he hurried to repair the sheepfold by plugging the hole, after which his sheep have never been missing anymore.

We have learned from the story that bigger losses can be prevented as long as problems are solved in time.
